How to play the song happy birthday on piano. What are the notes for happy birthday on piano. Happy birthday piano sheet music easy with letters.

Here are two Happy Birthday easy piano music arrangements for young pianists. The first one is for children who have only just started to play, with just the simple melody line centered on middle C so they'll find it really quick to master. And the second is an easy piano music arrangement for both hands together which is more suitable for someone who's been playing a little longer. If you're new to teaching piano to kids, do take a look at my First Piano Lessons eBook which is filled with teaching tips, tricks and games for teaching young children the piano in an engaging way. When kids first start learning any instrument, the challenge is to get them hooked. And while of course it's very important to make sure that they learn the correct theory and technique, it's also really important to make sure that they are having fun and enjoying the experience of playing pieces that they want to play both for themselves and for others. So Happy Birthday is a great choice, as it's one of the first and most important songs a child will learn, it has such a special significance and is of course one that that they will come to sing many times every year. So naturally it makes a great piece for young pianists to play. They always love being able to play it for their friends at birthday parties and it goes down so well with Granny too! Place hands over the notes, with both thumbs (1s) on middle C, 2. To prepare, ask the child to play and name the notes C, D, E, F, G with the right hand 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 both up, and back down again. Then do the same with the left hand going downwards (they will find this more difficult at first) C, B, A, G, F and back up again to middle C. 3. Look at the Happy Birthday sheet music and ask the child to work out the first note on "Happy". This is G with the left hand finger 4. As they will know the tune already they should find it quite easy to work out the first phrase, but help them to notice what the jump (interval) is on "to you". It is a 4th, this means they jump from 4 - 1 which is G - C. Practice One Phrase At A Time 4. The second phrase starts the same (so is just repeated) but point out the jump (interval) is one step higher (a 5th) from G - D, using the right hand fingers 2 - 1 on "to you". Practice these first two phrases a couple of times. 5. The third phrase starts again on G "Ha-ppy" in the left hand with 4th finger, but the jump is a whole 8 notes (octave) up to the G "Birth" in the right hand finger 5. Practice finding this jump a couple of times. The right hand then plays 3 - 1 on "day - dear" and the left hand plays 2 - 3 on B - A which is where you insert the name of the Birthday boy/girl. 6. The fourth phrase is played by the right hand with the 4th finger on F for "Ha-ppy" then 3, 1, 2, 1, E - C - D - C on Birth - to you! 7. Once the child has identified all the notes it's very good practice to sing the names of the notes as they play them. This is difficult at first and should be attempted very slowly and with no pressure, but it really checks that they fully understand what they are playing, and are not just relying on their memories! 8. Remember to take it slowly for very young ones, it's always best to practice in short frequent sessions for just a few minutes each time. Once the child has grasped playing it, they won't want to stop! Happy Birthday easy piano music Download the sheet music here. Find more easy sheet music like in our free resources! Happy Birthday Easy Piano Music For Both Hands This version is in the key of G major which has an F sharp (F#) . If your child or pupil is new to reading music, take a look at this post on How to Read Music Made Easy. Left Hand 1. First explain the key signature making sure the child is familiar with the F#. You could also play the scale of G major to help them understand the concept of different keys. Spend a little time finding the F# as well as spotting them in the music. Work out which finger plays them? Does the left hand have any? How many are there? There are only 2 in the right hand both times with 2nd finger. 2. Start with the left hand, since this likely to be the most challenging, singing the tune along as you play the chords. Find the hand position for the first G chord by identifying the bottom note and explaining that basic chords are made with fingers 5, 3 & 1, and the bottom note is the key note (tonic), in this case G. Now look ahead and count all of the G chords (there are a lot!). The chords are mostly played on the first beat of the bar on the syllables 'birth' and 'you'. 3. After the first G chord, in the 2nd bar the left hand fingers 1 & 2 play C & D. This should sound slightly clashing as it is what's called a dominant 7th. The same chord is repeated for the 3rd bar, then bars 4 & 5 are G chord again. On the 7th bar, the thumb 1 & 3 each have to move up one note to E and middle C as the words sing the name of the name of whose birthday it is. On the last 'birthday' the chords are G chord, C&D for one beat on 'to' and finally a last G chord on 'You!' 4. Practise playing the left hand while singing along with the tune as this helps with the rhythm. Right Hand 5. The right hand tune is much easier to work out as it is so familiar. Spend a little time identifying and naming the notes before you play anything. Recognise the distance between the notes where the tune jumps, whether it is a 4th 1 - 4 or 5th 1 - 5 on 'to you!'. Notice the octave leap on the 3rd 'Happy birthday' work it out each phrase by phrase before you attempt to play it all the way through. 6. Once the right hand is ready, you can play one hand each together as a duet, swapping over to make sure you practise both hands. 7. Only attempt both hands together when they can play each hand easily and feel ready to try. The first couple of times, it might be helpful to prompt them verbally when they should change the chord in the left hand, or which note comes next in the right hand. It is really important to take a slow tempo and keep a relaxed approach, making light of any mistakes - the most important thing is to have a go and have some fun! Happy Birthday, with two new late elementary/early intermediate arrangements perfect for singalongs, as well as for my favorite student exercise - transposing!Also: guitar tabs in two different keys!with an easy chord piano arrangement that uses helper notes - notes with letters inside! In addition, other arrangements of Happy Birthday are offered here in multiple keys for all instruments, and with several arrangements for piano. Your students can learn it with this free, printable sheet music. Please scroll down the page for the download links. The purpose of the initial rolled chord I love to start "Happy Birthday" with a rolled chord as shown above (and below), because it primes everyone to know just when to jump into the song!The left hand split chords of this arrangement are just the I, IV, and V7 chords. Very basic, and all piano players need to have an understanding of the relationship of these three chords. Here, because we are in the key of C, those chords end up being C, F, and G7. Introducing... seventh chords! I have found it difficult to get my students to feel comfortable with the seventh chords, so this newest arrangement is going to get a big push from me in the coming months!For chord newbies: regular chords are TRIADS - on the piano it looks like "note, skip, and skip." To turn that triad into a seventh chord, just add one more skip. (That's not the end of the story, but it's the BASIC idea.) The arrangement below is essentially the same as the first one shown, except for:the initial rolled chord is figured with a glissando mark instead of individual noteswhen the same chord is played for two measures in a row, a secondary bass note is used instead of the root of the chord Please scroll down the page for the download links. This one will be much trickier! But I think students' understanding of playing chord inversions will grow exponentially. Why will their understanding of chord inversions grow? Because I intend to make those students for whom this level is appropriate TRANSPOSE this song, from the key of C to G, then to D, then to A, etc. Around the Circle of Fifths. Happy Birthday with guitar tabs Easy guitar tabs in the key of D... Please scroll down the page for the download links. And in the key of G: Please scroll down the page for the download links. A left hand part that stays still Here is the newest! EASY piano arrangement, very elementary-level friendly with a few lettered notes. Scroll on down the page for the free downloadable PDF links: Please scroll down the page for the download links. Please scroll down the page for the download links. The Happy Birthday piano sheet music arrangement I feature just above uses a simple, bouncy left-hand chord accompaniment in the "Oom-pah-pah" style. I call it simple because it is simple to UNDERSTAND. All the chords are in root position, and there is the seventh chord, as plain as plain, with its 4 notes.Coordinating the two hands will take a lot of practice, but it will be worth it. This is the approach I started with as a student My piano teacher (Mrs. Catherine Hahn, a wonderful woman) began her students with this "bass note, chord, chord" approach, using all root-position chords instead of inversions. This made understanding basic chords and even the 7th chords very easy. Below is the melody of Happy Birthday as a lead sheet, for any instrument. Verse two uses words I heard in Sunday School as a child, but did not understand until I was an adult! Please scroll down the page for the download links. The meaning of verse two "Happy Birthday to you -- Only one (just having ONE birthday) will not do!" "Born again" ("Ye must be born again", John Chapter 3 in the New Testament portion of the Bible) means Salvation; How many (how many "birth - days" -- how many times have you been BORN) have you? Below is a version for brave beginners who want to be able to play all of Happy Birthday themselves, even to the octave stretch and the chords. It is pretty easy, but kids need a bit of background in chord-playing first, such as Mary Had a Little Lamb (see that page for a little chord lesson). Happily for young players, this is one of those easy chords songs: Please scroll down the page for the download links. With these small chords, I like to tell my students "This is a D 'pinch' chord" (D & C together). "This is a 'little' C chord" (C & E together). Encountering black notes in the easy arrangements The version in G may be easier for your students to play, because with the key of F version, each hand has to deal with a Bb note. In the key of G version, only the right hand has a black note. However, the G arrangement uses several bass clef ledger line notes! You will have to decide. I think the G version is easier. Sharing the melody between the hands Here are the Middle-C versions for beginner piano students, the easiest arrangements of all. Use one of these to make a duet with your beginner piano student, or even have two students play together.First, the new "AlphaNotes" version. These fun notes turn a piece of music into note reading worksheets... Please scroll down the page for the download links. That one is EASY to read. The next one is a good challenge for your students still working on note-reading around Middle C: Please scroll down the page for the download links. Here is the same music again, but with chord symbols for a duet partner: Please scroll down the page for the download links. Make Happy Birthday a piano duet If you want to turn it into a 2-student duet (the melody or Primo part will have to be played UP an octave), here are the Happy Birthday chords spelled out in this Secondo part.Some of them are ROOT chords, and some are CHORD INVERSIONS:) Is Happy Birthday traditional? This song has BECOME traditional -- according to Wikipedia, Happy Birthday is the most-recognized song in the English language. However, the writers are known to history -- two sisters named Mildred and Patty Hill, who wrote the song in 1893. Originally the words weren't Happy Birthday at all, but "Good morning to you, good morning to you. Good morning, dear children, good morning to you!"
